1 EXT. COUNTY ROAD BUS SHELTER - NIGHT 1

Rain on a tin roof. One bulb. RENNIE (40s), wet coat, a duffel she has packed too carefully, sits alone on the bench. She checks a paper ticket. Checks it again.

Headlights. A pickup rolls in and idles. CAL (30s), her younger brother, gets out without killing the engine.

CAL
You weren't going to call.

RENNIE
I left a note.

CAL
On the fridge. Under the magnet from Mom's church. Where nobody looks.

RENNIE
(not looking at him)
Then why are you here?

CAL
Because you always do this. Get in the truck, Ren.

RENNIE
I'm not angry, Cal. I'm just done.

She tears the ticket in half. Then in half again. Lets the pieces fall into the rain.

CAL
That looked angry.

MOM (V.O.)
(on his phone, speaker)
Calvin, did you find her? Is she eating?

Cal kills the call. Rennie almost laughs.

2 INT. CAL'S PICKUP - MOVING - CONTINUOUS 2

Wipers. The heater roars and does nothing. Rennie holds the duffel on her lap like it might leave without her.

SAMPLE SIDES

CAL
Where were you going to go?

RENNIE
Does it matter?

CAL
It matters to the guy who just drove forty minutes in this.

RENNIE
Tucson. There's a woman there who rents rooms over a bakery. You wake up and the whole place smells like bread. I read about it. I read about it for two years, Cal. Every night after Dad's pills, after the dishes, after you went home to your actual life, I read about a room over a bakery in Tucson and I thought, one day. One day I'm going to be a person who wakes up somewhere that smells like bread.

CAL
You never said anything.

RENNIE
I'm saying it now.

CUT TO:

SAMPLE SIDES

3 EXT. TRUCK STOP MOTEL - PARKING LOT - DAWN 3

Gray light. The pickup is parked crooked across two spaces. Rennie is outside it, duffel on her shoulder. Cal stands at the open driver's door.

CAL
The house. Tell me you didn't.

RENNIE
Signed it Thursday.

CAL
That's Dad's house.

RENNIE
Dad's been gone eleven months. It's *

(MORE)

RENNIE (CONT'D)
a house.

Cal slams the truck door. Rennie doesn't flinch. She's been waiting for that sound.

CAL
Get back in the truck.

RENNIE
No.

CAL
Ren, I swear to God.
I SAID GET IN THE TRUCK.

RENNIE
(quiet)
Half of it's yours. It's already in your account. I'm not running away from you, Cal. I'm just not taking care of anybody anymore.

She walks toward the highway. Cal watches her go. He doesn't follow.

SAMPLE SIDES